

Does your visa or residence permit qualify for the Morocco eVisa?

Many nationalities can apply for the Morocco eVisa only with a supporting document: a multiple-entry visa or a residence permit from an accepted country. Follow the steps below to check yours before you apply and pay.

1. Do you need a supporting document?

Your nationality decides this, not the country where you live. Find your nationality at evis.ma/en/countries:

- eVisa with your passport only: you need no supporting document. Use our document checklist instead.
- eVisa with a supporting document: continue to step 2.
- Visa-free, or a different route: this guide does not apply to you.

2. Check your document

You need one of these two documents. Every box must be ticked.

A. Multiple-entry visa

- ☐ Issued by the Schengen Area (any Schengen state, including Norway), the United States, the United Kingdom, Ireland, Canada, Australia, New Zealand or Japan.
- ☐ It is multiple-entry. A single-entry visa does not count.
- ☐ It is valid for at least 90 days from your arrival date in Morocco.

Electronic visas and travel authorisations from these countries also count, for example a US ESTA or a UK ETA, as long as they allow multiple entries and are valid long enough.

B. Residence permit

- ☐ Issued by an EU country other than Cyprus, the United States (a green card counts), the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, Norway, Switzerland or the United Arab Emirates. Among Gulf countries, only a UAE residence permit is accepted.
- ☐ You hold the permit itself. A receipt for a renewal or an extension is not accepted.
- ☐ It is valid for at least 180 days from your arrival date in Morocco.
- ☐ You can upload both sides of the card. UK residents: see step 4.

Your passport is a separate rule: an ordinary passport, valid for more than 90 days on the day you apply and for your whole stay.

3. Count from your arrival date

Count from the day you plan to arrive in Morocco, not from the day you apply.

If you arrive on	A visa must be valid until at least	A residence permit must be valid until at least
1 December 2026	1 March 2027	30 May 2027
15 January 2027	15 April 2027	14 July 2027
1 March 2027	30 May 2027	28 August 2027

4. UK residents: BRP and digital status

- Your nationality decides whether you need a visa for Morocco; living in the UK does not. UK citizens travel visa-free for short stays. If your nationality needs a supporting document, your UK residence status can be it.
 - The UK replaced the physical Biometric Residence Permit (BRP) with a digital immigration status. New BRPs stopped being issued in late 2024, and BRP cards expired on 31 December 2024. You now prove your status online through your UKVI account.
- ☐ Your UK status is valid for at least 180 days from your arrival date in Morocco.
- ☐ As proof, upload your share code, or a screenshot of your status from your UKVI account that shows the date your status is valid until.

5. Common reasons a supporting document is refused

- ✗ A single-entry visa.
- ✗ Validity counted from the application date instead of the arrival date.
- ✗ Only one side of the residence card uploaded.
- ✗ A renewal receipt instead of the permit itself.
- ✗ An expired BRP card instead of UK digital status.
- ✗ A residence permit from a Gulf country other than the UAE.

6. Not enough validity left?

If your visa has less than 90 days left, or your residence permit less than 180 days, from your arrival date, the standard eVisa route will not accept it. Your options:

1. Use another qualifying document, if you have one.
2. Renew or extend your visa or permit first, then apply with the new document.
3. Choose an arrival date for which your document still meets the rule.

If none of these works: manual case assessment by evis.ma

- Send us your completed application with clear images of your visa or residence permit, front and back where applicable.
- We review your case individually. Standard response: 3 working days. Urgent response: 1 working day.
- If we accept your case, we continue with your application.
- Approval is not guaranteed. The Moroccan authorities make the final decision, and this service is not an exemption from the validity rules.
